Let's Start!

What's the new assignment about?

Learning Outcome

Discuss factual and abstract information about common everyday or job related topics in both work and social contexts appropriate for the interlocutor.

Ask your partner:

- What was the last assignment you had to do in your job?
- What was it about?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about an unusual or unique event related to work topics.
- I can request or report facts about events or actions related to work issues.
- I can talk about expectations for the future.

Let's Explore!

Boris assigns Kristi and Adam with a new assignment. Will they be writing copy for a puff*?

* "Copy" is something written in order to be printed in a newspaper, magazine, book etc.

 A "puff" is a piece of writing or a speech that praises someone.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Boris: Adam, Kristi. I have a new assignment for you both.
- Adam: We just finished up with one!
- Boris: Yes, Mr. Bari. I'll be expecting you to complete this task properly this time around.
- Kristi: What's the task?
- Boris: Each of you will be writing copy for a book jacket.
- Adam: Cool!
- Boris: The outer cover has folded flaps. You will be completing the flaps initially. The back cover is the one which will be printed with the author's bio. You'll be including a blurb and puffs of critical praise from reviewers on the back cover. You'll be both receiving a soft copy of the jacket.
- Kristi: How long will we have to complete all this?
- Boris: You'll be getting a feel for the tight deadlines involved in this industry. You have 2 days.
- Adam: That's it, 2 working days? It seems like we've been swamped with work this month.
- Boris: Yes, Mr. Bari. It seems you have forgotten how fast things move in the publishing world.
- Kristi: I have a question, is there a word count?
- Boris: You'll be realizing pretty quickly that there isn't much space and that every word counts. There are only about 150 words that'll be appearing on the back cover and they will arguably be the most important words in the entire book. After the title, the back cover appears to be what readers have looked at when deciding whether to make a purchase. Think of it as an ad.
- Kristi: Okay.
- Boris: Any more questions? Adam?
- Adam: No. However, there's an issue. There seems to have been a mix-up ... I think.
- Boris: Please be more specific.
- Adam: I'm looking at the e-mail that has a copy of the book jacket attached. This is for a children's book.
- Kristi: Yeah, I see it too. Aren't we working with a memoir?
- Boris: Hmmm ... aha! The matter appears to have been resolved.

Let's Practice!

Adam and Kristi get new assignments.

Extension Activity

Find a book jacket!

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Go to the library.
- Find 3-5 books of different genres with book jackets.
- Identify the different parts of them.
- What are the differences between the genres? How are the jackets different? Look for examples of the Future Continuous tense on the jackets.
- Write down your findings. Present them to a partner.

Target Words

- book jacket (noun): a paper cover of a book which you can remove e.g. Each of you will be writing copy for a book jacket.
- flap (noun): a thin flat piece of paper that is attached to a surface, which you can lift up easily e.g. The outer cover has folded flaps.
- author bio (noun): a short piece of writing about the life of someone who has written a book e.g. The back cover is the one which will be printed with the author's bio.
- blurb (noun): a short description giving information about something e.g. You'll be including a blurb on the back cover as well.
- critical praise (expression): positive reviews about something e.g. There will be puffs of critical praise.
- reviewer (noun): someone who writes about a new book in a newspaper or magazine
e.g. The critical praise will come up from reviewers.
- soft copy (noun): information shown on a screen rather than printed on paper e.g. You'll receive a soft copy of the assignment.
- word count (noun): the number of words in a document
e.g. Is there a word count for this document?

Learning Points

Perfect Infinitives After Seem and Appear

You use any perfect tense to talk about an action that is already completed. They connect past actions to current situations.

Ordinary infinitives usually talk about the present or future time periods.

You use perfect infinitives (to have + past participle) after linking verbs like seem and appear to talk about a previous time period.

For example:

There seems to have been some sort of mistake.

There appears to have been an error in the report.

Examples:

- It seems like we've been swamped with work this month.
- It seems you have forgotten how fast things move around here.
- There seems to have been a mix-up.
- The matter appears to have been resolved.

Learning Points

The Future Continuous and Stative Verbs

Stative verbs are verbs that describe states that stay the same instead of actions or events that change. The most common stative verb is to be.

You do not normally use stative verbs in the Future Continuous tense.

Some examples of stative verbs are: love, doubt, care, believe, remember.

You can use some stative verbs with the Future Continuous tense.
Look at the chart for a list of the kinds of stative verbs you can use:

Rule	Example
when they have an active meaning	You will be tasting a variety of wines.
when they emphasize change or development	You'll be including a blurb and puffs of critical praise.
when they involve a change in meaning	I'll be thinking about it later.
when they refer to physical feelings	My head will be aching by the end of the day.

Examples:

- I'll be expecting you to complete this task properly this time around.
- You'll be getting a feel for the tight deadlines.
- You'll be realizing pretty quickly that there isn't much space.
